

Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea

Every business man keeps some prominent notes on his desk as reminders of things that are really important in the daily upsurge and confusion.

I notice two on top of my private file. One says "license."

Now you think that, it being the first of the new year, this note refers to automobile license. But you are wrong.

It means fishing license. And bringing up that reminder automatically takes care of the automobile license question, for you have to have a car to go fishing nowadays. And from the emergency viewpoint the fishing license is of more consequence. You have the rest of this month to travel on a 1951 automobile tag—but that new fishing license was required as of January 1.

Now about that second memorandum—it's in code. But I'll tell you what it refers to.

It refers to that hot-rock envelope I put in my desk yesterday and haven't looked at since.

If I stay away from it like poison you and many millions more like you know why.

You got the same envelope I did. I know what's inside—because the outside is stamped "Collector of Internal Revenue."

It's that time of year—the time that begins with the Doldrums of January and ends with the Ides of March. I always felt Shakespeare in our day and time would have written it "hides."

Reds Accused of Planning Forced Repatriation

Munsan, Korea, Jan. 10 (AP) — Allied negotiators today accused the Communists of scheming to strengthen their forces in Korea by "forced repatriation" of prisoners of war.

Rear Adm. R. E. Libby said the Reds are "scared to death" of giving war prisoners freedom of choice as to whether they want to be repatriated.

He told the Reds that by opposing this principle in the Allied plan they "denounce individual freedom and advocate slavery."

The U. N. again rejected the Red compromise to supervise repatriation because it failed to ban construction and repair of military air fields.

As the armistice talks entered the seventh month subcommittees on truce supervision and prisoner exchange appeared tightly locked. However, both scheduled meetings for 11 a. m. Friday (9 p. m. CST Thursday) in Panmunjom.

Your opposition to our proposal is based solely on your aim of impairing your military manpower situation during an armistice," Libby told the Reds. "Only that which benefits your side militarily do you consider true and righteous."

Having augmented your forces throughout the war by freedom of choice, you now seek to continue to augment your forces by its opposite, forced repatriation."

North Korean Maj. Gen. Lee Sang Cho called Libby's statement "vicious propaganda."

Recognition of China on Paper Only

Washington, Jan. 10 (UP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill considers Britain's recognition of Red China only a "paper relation ship."

Churchill doesn't intend to have his new Conservative government withdraw at this time the diplomatic recognition hastily granted by the late British Socialist government.

But he did promise President Truman, according to American officials, that Britain's recognition of the Chinese Communist regime will not stand in the way of British action with the rest of the free world to meet any threat of aggression by Red China.

Both Churchill and Mr. Truman were thinking especially of Indo China where, it is feared, the Chinese Communists might make their next move if and when the Korean War ends.

British sources disclosed meanwhile that Churchill has no intention of trying to arrange a personal meeting with Russian Premier Josef Stalin at this time.

There had been advance speculation that the British leader might go to Moscow alone if—as proved to be the case—Mr. Truman was cool to the idea of a Big Three meeting.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden remained behind when Churchill went to New York yesterday in order to continue talks with Secretary of State Dean Acheson today and tomorrow. They planned to give special attention to Middle East and Far East problems.

American officials had feared that Britain's nominal diplomatic relations with China might pull the British punch a little in meeting any new Red thrust in Asia.

But Churchill, who left Washington with a fairly full bag of accomplishments in his talks with Mr. Truman, gave what were described as complete assurances on this score.

The most important part of the agreement on the Far East was said by the Americans to be this sentence:

"We recognize that the overriding need to counter the Communist threat in that area transcends such divergences as there are in our policies toward China."

Congress Wants Economy and No More Taxes

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP) — An election-year Congress responded with demands for economy and no more taxes today to President Truman's state of the union appeal for a broad program of foreign aid and domestic spending.

Lawmakers gave signs they will support a speedup in efforts to increase American military might.

But Republicans and Southern Democrats, who can muster a majority of both Houses, appeared determined to back down the amount of foreign aid and to scuttle many of the President's domestic social security proposals.

They had some backers among administration supporters for their "economy and no more taxes" movement.

With Britain's Prime Minister Winston Churchill listening intently from a gallery seat, Mr. Truman called on Congress yesterday to meet the "very real" threat of World War III by bolstering the free nations of Europe and Asia with more economic and military aid.

The President proposed, among other things, (1) an increase in the size of the U. S. armed forces, (2) an expansion of Point Four aid abroad to combat "stomach communism," (3) together with in station controls and (4) a list of domestic welfare measures including defense housing, labor law revisions, aid to education, medical care, stronger farm price supports and a $5 a month boost in social security benefits.

Sen. McFarland of Arizona, the Democratic leader, was pleased that Mr. Truman called for an increase in the size of the air force and stepped up defense production.

"I was glad that he stressed the necessity of carrying on our domestic program," McFarland said. "His advocacy of more social security is in line with what I proposed and what was adopted by the Senate in the last session."

Vice President Barkley thought the message "super" and Sen. Edwin C. Johnson (Colo.) who doesn't always agree with Mr. Truman called it "one of the President's better speeches."

Republicans pounded the point that Mr. Truman made no mention of economies. Sen. Ives (R-NY) said the message "showed practically no concern over the actual economic welfare of the country."

Sen. Martin (R-Pa.) said Mr. Truman was proposing high taxes, big spending, deficit financing, unbalanced budgets and ever-increasing debt.

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) had no comment except to observe that Mr. Truman seemed to have "backed down" on previous demands for repeal of the Taft-Hartley act.

The President asked for revision of the law.

Republicans and some Democrats looked upon his message as outlining the general issues on which his party must stand in next November's election, irrespective of whether he decides to run again.

Stormy Atlantic Claims Flying Enterprise But Heroic Captain Is Saved

LOSES TOW LINE — Capt. Henrik Kurt Carlsen, right, skipper of the storm-tossed freighter Flying Enterprise, and Kenneth Dancy, first mate of the tug, are seen from the tug Enterprise as they struggle to save the ship. The Enterprise, which is some 30 miles from Lizard's Head, an ancient graveyard for ships near the Cornish coast, is again battered by waves twenty-three feet high, the skipper says. Some speculation that the famed skipper and mate may abandon ship and make had to abandon ship. (NEA Telephoto)

Two Weeks Duel Won by Sea; Companion Save

London, Jan. 10 (AP) — The gall American freighter Flying Enterprise, prize sank in the stormy Atlantic today after a mighty two-weeks duel with the sea. Heroic Capt. Kurt Carlsen and first mate, Kenneth Dancy of the tug Turmoil, were snatched from the churning waters to safety.

Carlsen and Dancy leaped overboard when it became evident the 6,711-ton freighter was going down under the crashing waves. The stand-by rescue fleet closed in. The tug Turmoil threw over a rope ladder and the two men clambered to safety. They were in the water only about four minutes.

Carlsen refused to give up until the stricken freighter obviously was hoisting her last. He had battled since the Christmas Day hurricane to save his ship. His solitary duel with the Atlantic began Dec. 25 after he ordered all hands to abandon the ship, which carried a crew of 40 and 10 passengers.

Dancy joined him last Saturday. The big freighter thrashed about in its final agony for 40 minutes and then disappeared. Aboard the British salvage tug Turmoil, Carlsen and Dancy, bearded and exhausted, climbed into dry clothing as the tug turned hurriedly in the signal "C-L-O-S-E."

The funnel of the Enterprise by this time was slapping the surface of the sea. The bow was considerably lower than the stern. A little American flag still fluttered over the rear part of the superstructure.

The wind was blowing fiercely, pitching the rescue tugs about like chips of wood.

Water poured into the funnel of the dying Enterprise.

Search Starts for Crew That Quit Ship

Seattle Jan. 10 (AP) — Forty-five crewmen aboard the disabled freighter Pennsylvania abandoned the ship last night and today ships and airplanes sped to a spot on the storm-tossed waters of the North Pacific where they hope to find the seamen.

The crewmen and their officers left the split-open water-logged jinx ship at 4:30 p. m. Pacific standard time (7:30 p. m. EST) to fight mountainous seas and high winds in frail life boats.

Four terse messages in the space of 25 minutes told of the dwindling hope after 10 hours of trying to regain control of the 7,800-ton ship. It was down at the bow and shipping tons of water through a 14-foot crack on its port side.

At 6 a. m. yesterday, Capt. George P. Plover of Portland, Ore., radioed his vessel was in trouble. At noon he sent an SOS reporting the crack in the hold and that the ship was taking water.

At 4:05 p. m. the radio reported the crewing, which had been out of order, was fixed but useless. The stern was completely out of water.

"It looks like our only hope is for the weather to moderate," the Pennsylvania's radio said. Then it went silent for 17 minutes.

At 4:22 they sent another SOS and said, "It looks like we have to abandon ship."

Five minutes later: "Forty-five persons aboard. Four boats."

And at 4:30 the final dramatic words: "Leaving now."

Meanwhile seven ships — the closest some 180 miles distant — began churning toward the spot 465 miles northwest of the northern tip of Vancouver Island and 600 miles south of Central Alaska's southern coastline. It is one of the roughest areas in the Pacific Ocean mariners say, and the weather yesterday and today is among the worst in three years.

Four airplanes left during the night from U. S. Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard points. They won't be able to set down but should reach the isolated spot at daybreak to guide surface vessels and drop such supplies as may be needed, including life rafts and first aid equipment.

The first ship is expected to reach the scene about 1 a. m. (1 p. m. EST) and two more in the next three hours.

The Pennsylvania, a former Victory ship originally named Luxembourg Victory, was en route to Japan when it developed a crack in its deck plates on the starboard side, forward of the main deck house. The vessel put back to Portland, Ore., for repairs before continuing to the Orient. It left Seattle Saturday on its current ill-fated voyage.

The vessel is operated by the States Steamship Co.

Responsibility for Cleanup Up to McGrath

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP) — President Truman today placed full responsibility for the government cleaning up job on Attorney General J. Howard McGrath. He also announced McGrath will continue in his cabinet post.

The President told his weekly news conference, in response to questions, the attorney general will carry out the job that is necessary in connection with the investigation of reports of scandals within the government.

The President himself confirmed for the first time in recent weeks that McGrath is not stepping out of the cabinet.

In reply to other questions today, the President said he had dropped any idea of a special commission such as the one to which he tried to appoint Judge Thomas F. Murphy of New York. Murphy once accepted then turned down the assignment.

Mr. Truman said there will be no special commission and that McGrath will carry out whatever is necessary. He said he thinks the law enforcement officer of the government is the man who should conduct the cleanup.

Churchill Is Visiting B. Baruch

New York, Jan. 10 (AP) — Britain's Prime Minister Winston Churchill put aside his official duties today and relaxed as host guest of his 81-year-old friend, financier Bernard M. Baruch.

The 77-year-old British leader, apparently tired from his 18 hours of meetings with President Truman throughout the day, lounging about in Baruch's nine-room apartment. Churchill arrived here from Washington last night by train.

Aides said he planned only to read the newspapers, nap, smoke his long cigars — and take an occasional sip of his favorite brandy.

Members of the American Irish Milteneers — who frequently picketed visiting English dignitaries in behalf of Irish unification — marched in front of Baruch's apartment house for an hour and a half last night. The group of pickets reached a maximum of 60.

Some of the pickets' placards read:

"Churchill's coming now, ain't it so? He arms the Reds with American dough."

"Don't cheat on income tax, there won't be enough for Churchill."

"Churchill should get a loaded cigar instead of a loaded money bag."

State Tag Sales Above Normal, City About Same

More state automobile tags have been sold than during the same period last year, Revenue collector Buford Metcalf, said today. But at Hope City Hall, Treasurer Charles Ryerson, reported sales to be about the same.

Deadline for state and city tags is midnight, January 31. There can be no extension by legislative act. State tag purchasers are required to assess their autos in the tax assessors' office.

They will be given an assessment slip which must be presented along with pink slip and title certificate at the revenue office.

To Speed Up Tax Fraud Prosecutions

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP) — The Treasury and Justice Department are debating backstage — with some irritation — deep-seated differences of opinion over how to speed up lagging tax fraud prosecutions.

Briefly, the Treasury wants to by-pass lengthy case reviews by high officials in Washington; the Justice Department says such reviews are necessary to protect taxpayers from excessive prosecution.

In many cases, files have languished for several hundred days in Washington offices after Treasury field experts said they were ready for court action, Treasury officials said.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder announced Tuesday his department is cutting red tape by letting field offices send tax fraud cases directly to the attorney general for action.

Until now, the average case was reviewed for almost three months by higher Treasury officials in Washington even before it hit the Justice Department.

The Justice Department insists, however, that all cases still must be channeled through higher echelons in Washington.

Snyder and Attorney General McGrath discussed the issue in a conference at the White House earlier this week. President Truman wasn't in on the debate then but he may have to settle the question.

Both Snyder and McGrath have come under critical fire of some investigating congressmen for delays in handling tax fraud prosecutions.

McGrath's assistant, a charge of the tax division — T. Lamar Caudle — was fired by President Truman for "outside activities."

Says Gambler Defiant to Probers

New York, Jan. 10 (AP) — Rudolph Hally, former crime committee quiz master, says gambler Frank Costello was "definitely defiant" of Senate probers when he twice walked out of the hearings last March.

Hally and Costello faced each other again in a courtroom yesterday, this time during the third session of the gambler's trial for alleged contempt of the Senate.

Testifying in Federal Court, Hally told the jury:

"He (Costello) was definitely defiant and defiant, said, 'I'm leaving' and got up and left. What he did he did in a very definite manner."

The defense contends that the 60-year-old Costello suffered a chronic throat ailment and physically was unable to hear further questioning.

Telling of the gambler's initial walkout on March 15, Hally said he thought the hearings were conducted in "perfect order" and added:

"The atmosphere was similar to this courtroom except for the clicking of newsreel cameras. I thought, 'There was no talking and no applause. It was warmer, but the heat was not unbearable.'"

"He got up and walked out. We called him back in. He answered some further questions and left again with his attorney. He appeared very much agitated just as he appears right now."

Sitting quietly and composed — except for fidgeting hands seen by millions of television during the Senate hearings — Costello flushed and then smiled broadly.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan told the jury to disregard the remark.

Truman May Seek Taxes Later

Washington, Jan. 10 (UP) — A source close to the administration reported today that President Truman will ignore the warnings of his congressional lieutenants and ask for another tax increase.

The informant said a recommendation for higher taxes was included in an early draft of the state of the union message which Mr. Truman presented to a joint session of the House and Senate yesterday.

But the specific proposal was omitted from the final message in favor of a general statement that high taxes will be needed for several more years.

Mr. Truman will send his tax recommendations to Congress later this month, the informant said. No final decision has been made on whether they will be included in the President's economic message Jan. 16, or in his budget message Jan. 21.

Speaker Sam Rayburn and other congressional leaders already have made clear that Congress, while lukewarm to some parts of the legislative program outlined by Mr. Truman yesterday, positively is cold to any sort of general tax increase.

Preliminary budget estimates indicate the federal deficit for fiscal 1953 under present tax rates will exceed 10,000,000,000. Taxes have been raised twice since the Korean war began, but the rearmament program has pushed spending up even faster.

Many members speculated that the President would hesitate to recommend an all-brackets tax increase in this election year. They thought he might call for correcting "inequities" in present law, and say little or nothing about a general tax increase.

Republicans charged that in his state of the union address, devoted largely to a restatement of many measures he previously has proposed to Congress Mr. Truman was opening a reelection campaign with "phantom programs."

"It is evident that the administration, trapped between its own lack of statesmanship and its record blunders, is without policies for solution of either our international or domestic problems," House Republican leaders said in a joint statement.

Underwriting Asia Security Faces U. S.

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP) — The question of whether the United States should underwrite the security of Southeast Asia — perhaps by sending in troops if necessary — confronted the administration today in the wake of the Truman-Churchill conference.

The issue of what the Western Powers and particularly the United States should do about possible Communist aggression in the area is high on the list of problems under discussion between Secretary of State Acheson and British Foreign Secretary Eden, who was learned, Tomorrow it also will be taken up by military chiefs of the United States, Britain, and France in a three-power conference opening at the Pentagon.

A communique issued by the President and Prime Minister yesterday, about the time Churchill left on a trip to New York or Ottawa, reported that a "broader harmony of view" had developed on the "many grave problems affecting our two countries in the Far East."

This was applied specifically to Communist China, with the statement that "we recognize that the overriding need to counter the Communist threat in that area transcends such divergences as there are in our policies toward China."

Britain's recognition of Communist China continues its relationship with the Nationalist government in Formosa.

After declaring support for the fight against the Reds in Korea, the President and Prime Minister welcomed the forthcoming military talks on Southeast Asia and their purpose will be "to consider specific measures to strengthen security" of that area.

There have been persistent reports recently that the Chinese Reds are building up strength near Indochina for a major offensive.

A decision on the matter will be made at some later date by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. But farmers will have to vote each issue before it can go into effect.

Members of the Farm Bureau Milk Producers Association, representing 250 dairy farmers in seven counties in Arkansas and two in Oklahoma, have asked the government to fix prices.

Governor May Try to Pull a Jeff Davis

By WILLIAM W. HUGHES

Little Rock, Jan. 10 (CP)

The time is fast approaching when Gov. Sid McMath must decide if he will try to become the second Arkansas governor in history to receive a third term.

No one has pulled the trick since Jeff Davis won a third term shortly after the turn of the century. But McMath does not consider this but a deterrent and from all reports and his own actions, in almost certain to announce for reelection in February or March.

The governor already has filed the third and fourth terms given Gov. Earl Warren of California and Thomas Dewey of New York as justification for any attempt he might make for the job.

But as it may, political observers here are having a heyday considering all factors that would enter into a try by McMath to make it three in a row.

It is the consensus that a race for governor by McMath in 1952 also is a race for senator by McMath in 1954. McMath's advisers are quite willing to admit that if he gets a third term, he will use it as a springboard for the United States senatorial race against Sen. John

McClellan in 1954. That's the top take of the McMath forces in the race. They claim that a third gubernatorial term would result in an almost certain victory over Mc

Clellan in congressional races.

As far as McMath's chances to win a third term are concerned, his supporters claim these factors will help him.

1. That he will get the labor vote because he has done nothing to oppose labor and because of his ability to speak to the labor convention of the American Association of Labor last year.

2. That he will get the school vote from the school teachers and administrators because of his support for more financial aid to the schools.

3. That he will get the rural vote because of his support of the Rural Electrification Administration and his fight against private utility interests.

4. That he will get the Negro vote because of his liberal attitude on racial problems.

5. That his opposition to the Disle Downs racetrack franchise will win support of the church people.

And that his "progressive"

attitudes, his personal magnetism, his ability as a campaigner and the great amount of favorable national publicity that has come his way all will reflect in his favor.

But McMath's foes answer with these arguments:

1. The investigations of the highway department and of the governor's income tax returns have brought widespread antagonism to his administration.

2. There is always a general opposition to a third term for any governor.

3. The governor's tie-in with the national administration which Mc

Math's enemies claim will go down to defeat with him.

4. The state administration's stand against a referendum vote on the 1951 purchasing act which the governor's enemies argue is an attempt to prevent the people from exercising their rights as voters.

5. The defeat of the governor's program by the 1951 legislative body shaken the electorate's confidence in him.

Soviets Hail UN Vote a Victory

Memphis, Jan. 10 (AP)

The Soviet Union today hailed yesterday's vote in the United Nations political com- mittee at Paris as a victory for the Soviet Union and a blow to the world prestige of the United States.

The political committee called the Soviet Union's attempt to place Korean terms negotiations before the security council.

It then recommended that the security council call a top-level meeting on world tensions when it takes such a meeting would do some good. The Soviet Union joined in the vote for this, and there were no votes against it. It bore only a slight resemblance to the Soviet resolution, however. The So- viets, explained they voted for it because it contained their clause stating that the Security Council had the primary task of maintain- ing peace.

Other States to Try School Experiment

Fayetteville, Jan. 10 (AP) — Several other states are reported to be interested in undertaking the so-called "bold experiment" in teacher education should Arkansas decide not to do so.

Dean Henry Kronenberg of the University of Arkansas College of Education said the 15 state and private colleges in Arkansas so far have not decided whether they'll participate in the proposed program.

Kronenberg spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Fayetteville Lions Club yesterday.

He didn't identify the other states which he said are bidding for the program. He said that not all Arkansas colleges would have to agree to the plan before it could be put into effect.

Kronenberg said he expected some sort of a decision from Arkansas educators at a meeting in Little Rock next week.

Designed to raise the level of education among teachers, the proposal calls for a 4-year college course for prospective teachers. They would receive training in liberal arts rather than learning teaching techniques. These techniques would be taught in a one-year apprenticeship or internship in public or private schools under the direction of a master teacher.

Cost of the multi-million dollar program would be financed by the Ford foundation.

The foundation said it would finance the plan for 6 to 10 years. Arkansas would serve as the nation's pilot state for such a program.

So far approval of the plan by the colleges has been delayed pending a complete study of the proposal.

DOROTHY DIX

Too Many Home Duties

Dear Miss Dix: Everything in our house was true until my older sister quit school and got a job. Now I must take over all the responsibilities of the house including the care of a 9 year old brother whom I can't manage. I am 15. I don't mind the work but since my sister has been earning money she doesn't have to do anything at home at all. I must always be the one to stay at home and mind the younger children at night, even if I had a previously planned evening. My sister doesn't even pay board. Do you think this is fair?

The club adjourned to meet in February with Mrs. Bryan Camp as hostess.

Parents Wrong Here

Parents make a big mistake when they exalt a wage-earner to high station. What they are doing is making very apparent the fact that in their home the most important thing is to bring in money. Such an attitude induces the younger members of the family to rush out to work as soon as possible, abandoning all attempts to acquire an education. This may be the very result for which the parents hope; if they are more interested in financial gain than in their children's welfare, no effort will be made to keep youngsters in school as long as possible. Of course, as each child in turn takes his place in the business world, he too will relinquish participation in the home routine. Family solidarity itself suffers as a consequence.

The proper family interchange of give and take will result that a third member is relieved of tasks now and then, though never should it be accepted as a general practice that any one child be exempt from all household work. As long as a son or daughter remains under the parental roof, a contribution towards the family welfare in the shape of regularly assigned tasks should be expected of him. To see that such duties are met out and executed is a prime parental responsibility.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 20, and about seven months ago was going with a boy of 21. We were in love and planned to be married, but I started to look at things in a different way. He wasn't too friendly with my family, and I also realized that when the dizziness wore off I wasn't going to be satisfied with his financial status. So I broke off, and haven't seen him since. I am still determined to forget him, but wonder if I was foolish to be so practical!

Answer: It is sometimes possible to be too practical about love. It's doubtful, however, if any young romance could stand a cold, calculating analysis of all practical facts. Since you found fault with your erstwhile sweetheart on the two major points of family relationship and finance, you probably were quite right to cancel the friendship. Regrets will avail you nothing, anyway, as he is probably beyond recall now. Men have their pride too, and seldom like to be sent away, then whistled for.

Dear Miss Dix: I am in my early 20's. The man I love is in business with a woman. They are very friendly, and naturally spend a great deal of time together. He is only mildly interested in me, a situation I am desirous of overcoming. Would this partner stand in the way of a romance between us?

Answer: Aren't you rather reaching for the moon? To yearn for a man who has shown no serious interest in you, and who is probably in love with someone else, is surely a great waste of time, and emotion. Whether your friend is really in love with his partner or not is beside the point. He is not particularly interested in you! You might try furthering the acquaintance with an invitation to a dance or something of that sort but don't hope for too much.

Since you found fault with your erstwhile sweetheart on the two major points of family relationship and finance, you probably were quite right to cancel the friendship. Regrets will avail you nothing, anyway, as he is probably beyond recall now. Men have their pride too, and seldom like to be sent away, then whistled for.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 20, and about seven months ago was going with a boy of 21. We were in love and planned to be married, but I started to look at things in a different way. He wasn't too friendly with my family, and I also realized that when the dizziness wore off I wasn't going to be satisfied with his financial status. So I broke off, and haven't seen him since. I am still determined to forget him, but wonder if I was foolish to be so practical!

Answer: It is sometimes possible to be too practical about love. It's doubtful, however, if any young romance could stand a cold, calculating analysis of all practical facts. Ted Williams Called for Marine Duty Boston, Jan. 10 (AP) — Ted Williams, baseball's top salaried slugger, has been recalled by the U.S. Marine Corps and is physically fit, probably still in the Boston Red Sox until he receives the company's call.

That $100,000-plus performer is one of seven hundred former Marine draftees being called back as replacements for Korean veterans now on active duty.

Recalled from Marine headquarters in Washington were that Williams, who is all report at near 100 percent, and a physical examination on April 2. If found fit, he will go on active duty on May 1, and at least 12 months.

"If the service wants me, I'm ready. I'm not any different than the rest of the boys," Williams phoned General Manager Joe Cronin from his Florida home, saying he was ready to go.

"But I'll go through all of the physical and fit with the club and await further orders," Williams added.

Williams' chance of passing the Marine's strict physical tests for its draftees are considered dubious in that service's local circles.

Ted fractured his left elbow during the 1950 All-Star game and the resulting surgery has hampered that arm's mobility ever since.

Williams missed three seasons, from 1943 through 1945, because of World War II service. He qualified as a Marine flyer at Chapel Hill, N. C., and Pensacola, Fla., and served as an instructor at Pearl Harbor.

Washington reported that Williams was being recalled as a replacement for a player called back to about $100 a month compensation, including allowances for dependents and previous service. He is married and the father of a small daughter. Recently he purchased a new home for his family in Miami.

Clark County Hires Dr. Ross

Arkadelphia, Jan. 7 (AP) — Dr. T. Ross, former Arkansas State Health officer, has been appointed Clark County Medical Officer. He took over the post yesterday.

Dr. Ross started his medical career in Clark County, later joining the State Health Department. He served as state health officer from 1933 until last April, when he resigned to join the Veterans Administration at Lubbock, Tex.

He resigned that position recently and returned here.

particular put collared, knee, escalator, and punch on the best-buys list this week.

These have been major items in the Fair Deal program: wiping out or revising the Taft-Hartley act; federal aid to education; civil rights; pre-paid health insurance; raising the minimum wage; widening social security and low cost housing.

Through the years Mr. Truman has banged away at all of them. Except for the last three, Congress has ignored them. Yesterday Mr. Truman dusted them off and dropped them into Congress' basket again.

Not there are some other reasons besides the political ones mentioned. Why Congress is or has been reluctant about pushing through the Fair Deal.

It will, truly, this year be up to its neck in the Russian dilemma in approving measures for defense, and the money to pay for it and the rest of our foreign program.

Besides, this is a highly prosperous year when most people have jobs and money, and profits are high. In prosperous years there's no eagerness in Congress for social changes.

Retail prices of butter, eggs, citrus fruits, celery and lettuce were lower in most stores this week.

Chickens cost a little more in many places, but changes in meat and poultry items generally were irregular and well scattered.

Lighter shipments of snap beans, brussels sprouts, carrots, cucumbers, onions, peppers and squash made them a little more expensive at retail.

Butter and egg prices varied widely from store to store and city to city, as is frequently the case in an unsettled market. Declines in butter at retail ranged from one to six cents a pound, and top grade eggs were off as much as eight cents in some places — with the possibility of even further cuts as storekeepers put both items high on their lists of advertised week-end specials to attract shoppers.

Heavier receipts of Florida oranges, grapefruit and tangerines sent their prices off sharply in most markets, and grapefruit was featured as an advertised bargain by many stores. California navel oranges were down less.

Pears, beets, cauliflower and radishes also were slightly lower priced. And the Agriculture De-

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Cincinnati, Jan. 10 (AP) — Tom Galley, the reformed tight promoter and baseball man, who is in the television business, now, has some rather heated arguments to give the college folks who want to keep football off the TV channels. Says Tom: "When I started with the Yankees we did about 900,000 spectators, that is a season. The next year we had television and went over two million. You can sell anything — beer, cars and sports. Galley claims the wacky pictures make new fans and movie hits right. And as for hurting the little fellow sports, he explodes: "You never heard of them throwing out a Yale-Harvard game because it took spectators away from Timmy and Wesleyan, did you?"

On the other hand, we heard two small college guys discussing the same subject. Said one: "If they all attend the television, in three years the networks will be dictating everything we do." He added: "In three years there won't be any football. That stuff hurts us, but it will kill high school football."

Waite Hoyt the pitcher turned broadcaster, came up with this one when he attended college baseball coaches banded last night. When Charley Devens came to the Yankees fresh from Harvard, his luggage was covered with hotel stickers as evidence of his worldwide travels during summer vacations. Devens was put in to room with Lefty Gomez, whose homespun humor provided a perfect contrast to Charley's haughty pudling club style. "What's the matter with you?" asked the leavened rookie. "Charley, have you ever been in Newark, New Jersey? No, I don't believe I have." "Well then," gassed Gomez, "it will be all new to you, won't it?"

Looks like Ward Coff, the old Giant footballer, is in line for the coaching job at Lafayette, which has been a good stepping stone to bigger positions. After all these years of talk about the lively ball in baseball, one manufacturer is coming up with a lively bat. Experimenting on production of the laminated bat which the college coaches hope will reduce the tried one that was mostly bamboo. The thing had so much "spring" that it was hard to hit anything, but homers with it — Dick, Gellers, Phil Hingley, the Cubs boss, is looking into the Chief Evans drugstore to see if baseball some other scent or material can't get up some sort of a similar plan. Chances are he'll forget it when he finds the Evans scholarship ships don't give any consideration to whether a caddy also can play golf.

Recruiting as it is done today is an unhealthy thing. Its bad for the boys and expensive for the colleges. You have a case of good athletics going on the auction block, waiting for the highest bidder.

"I feel that the other phases of college football which are being advertised are on the fringe of the problem. There's nothing wrong with spring football. The argument is that it takes too much time away from studying. How many college boys do you know who study between 3 and 6 p. m.?" At that time of day they're usually having a golf scholarship to see if baseball some other scent or material can't get up some sort of a similar plan. Chances are he'll forget it when he finds the Evans scholarship ships don't give any consideration to whether a caddy also can play golf.

Berry isn't alone in his views on recruiting, and at least two prominent coaches are moving voluntarily to curb some of the ills.

Bert Bryant of Kentucky has announced he'll do no more talent-hunting outside the state of Kentucky.

Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech has put his foot down on alumni of being money or other rewards to athletes.

Dodd says it's okay for an alumni to encourage an athlete to attend his Alma Mater so long as the encouragement is verbal and doesn't include cash, automobiles, promises of fabulous jobs and the like.

The NCAA Sanity code, as it was called, sought to restrict and standardize recruiting and subsidization along the lines suggested

Man to Trial in Wife's Disappearance

Arkansas City, Jan. 10. — Cecil Rice, 36-year-old ice plant operator, will go on trial here Jan. 22 in connection with the disappearance of his wife. He is charged with first degree murder.

Rice of nearby Dumas, Ark., surrendered to officers Dec. 12 and told them he thought he tossed his wife into the Mississippi River the preceding day. He said he had been drinking heavily and had only a hazy memory of his activities that day. Dragging the river for her body has been unsuccessful. Rice has been free on $25,000 bond.

Asked to name the necessities of life one pupil answered "Parents."

Controversy Over Track Getting Hot

West Memphis, Jan. 10. — The controversy over proposed location of a horse race track here is getting hotter.

Officials of Dixie Downs, Inc., seeking to build and operate the track yesterday accused two Memphis newspapers, the Commercial Appeal and The Press-Scimitar, of "slandering and twisting" statements made by the Dixie Downs spokesmen.

The accusation was made in letters mailed to voters in Crittenden county, who are to decide in a special election Jan. 22 whether the track franchise goes into effect.

The letters also said: "Memphis justly fears any development in Crittenden county which would curtail the flow of revenue into its coffers. This is the selfish attitude taken by many larger cities over their neighboring smaller cities."

In answer to the letters, Frank R. Alvaron, editor of the Commercial Appeal, said:

"The race track will bring nothing but distress in the long run. This is a fact, based on an inspection of the record at other communities where race tracks have operated."

"Our interest is in the future of a wholesome community."

Edward J. Meeman, editor of the Press-Scimitar, said:

"We represent our subscribers in West Memphis no less than we represent our subscribers in Memphis."

The election was ordered by the Arkansas Racing Commission when it granted the Dixie Downs permit last November.

Gov. McMath who said there'll never be another race track in Arkansas (the state's only track now is at Hot Springs) as long as he's governor, asked for the resignations of all racing commissioners who approved the permit.

When the commissioners didn't resign he said he would appoint a new commission in February.

The Rev. Russell Clubb of West Memphis, a leader of a church group opposing Dixie Downs, said yesterday Gov. McMath had assured him that the proposed race track could be blocked regardless of the outcome of the country referendum.

Clubb quoted the governor as saying that the racing commission could refuse to grant racing dates to Dixie Downs.

In Little Rock, the governor didn't mention the alleged conference with Clubb.

However, McMath said he would "seriously consider" the reappointment of racing Commissioners should they revoke the franchise of Dixie Downs.

The commission has been called into session Jan. 16 to reconsider qualifications of officials of Dixie Downs.

Ed Waller, secretary of Dixie Downs, Inc., said he doubted that the commission legally could revoke the franchise "solely on the command of the governor."

Opinion Is General on State Message

Washington, Jan. 10. — Arkansas' senators were general in their statements about President Truman's state of the union message yesterday.

Sen. Fulbright said the speech left him "depressed about the general state of the union," but added that Mr. Truman's pledge to weed "roadblocks out of government" encouraged him.

Sen. McClellan said that the message was "couched in generalities and was in some respects rather vague." He added that "on the whole the speech was dignified."

Comment from other members of the Arkansas delegation included:

Rep. Harris — "I was impressed by the fact that he didn't act like a candidate for president, even though he threw the book at us."

Rep. Trimble — "I thought it the best state of the union message he has made. It was calm and while I don't agree with all of it, it was a sensible speech."

Rep. Hays — "While I don't concur in all implications on the domestic front, I commend him for discussing these things with discussion and obvious tolerance."

Rep. Gathings — "He touched on one thing to my liking — price supports for farm commodities. That was most significant in view of demands on the farmer for food and fiber in the defense effort."

Planes Splatter Red Artillery

With U. S. Fifth Air Force, Korea, Jan. 9. — The Air Force tonight disclosed it had been waging a relentless attack on Communist artillery which resulted in a sharp drop in Allied frontline casualties.

The campaign to knock out enemy guns outside the reach of Allied artillery began in earnest 34 days ago. The Air Force said that in one sector alone, Allied casualties from enemy artillery fire were cut 60 per cent.

Ex-Diplomat, Noel Field, Predicted Fate

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 9 (UPI) — A sister of Noel H. Field, missing behind the Iron Curtain with his brother, wife and adopted daughter, today disclosed a hitherto unpublished letter from him in which he unwittingly foretold their eventual fate.

Dr. Elsie F. Doob made exclusively available to the United Press a letter from the former U. S. diplomat and Ukrainian relief director in which Field wrote about what to do in the event of his death.

He told of arrangements for his German-born wife, Hertha, Vincent Field, to be executed of his estate if he died, with his brother, Hermann, 41, to liquidate matters should Hertha also meet with death.

"Just what would be done if the three of us were to come a cropper, together, with no survivors, at the same time is more than my added loads can figure out," Noel said in the letter. It was sent to Hermann on March 10, 1940.

"I trust the issue is academic, anyway, and that Hertha and I will be able to keep out of the coffin, lunatic asylum and what not for a sizeable number of years to come."

Noel said he merely wanted to be prepared for any eventuality.

The letter proved to be a grim prophecy.

Noel, 47, disappeared May 12, 1940, in Prague, Czechoslovakia, less than two months after the letter was written.

Hermann set out in search of him, but Hermann also disappeared. He was last seen waiting for a plane at Warsaw, Poland, on Aug. 22, 1940.

Four days later, Hertha Field dropped from sight behind the Iron Curtain in Prague.

And a year later, Erika Field, a 25-year-old adopted daughter of the Noel Fields, disappeared while trying to trace her foster parents and Hermann through Berlin Communists.

In the letter, Noel said that should he, his wife and Hermann all meet with disaster, "I suppose the task of handling the financial affairs would in due course devolve upon Elsie."

Today Elsie (Dr. Doob) is waging a battle to learn the whereabouts of the four missing persons and obtain their release.

"I think the Communists want

Combining the advantages of the convertible with those of the conventional sedan is Studebaker's newest body style for 1952—the "Starliner," a five-passenger, hardtop convertible. The new model, which typifies the striking new design and appointments of the company's entire series of new models, is offered in both the Champion and Commander lines, and is available in eleven different two-tone color combinations. Upholstery trim includes two different nylon options as standard, and two leather options as extra-cost choices. Chrome wheel discs as shown are optional at extra cost.

them for a long time," Dr. Doob said.

"I think they are alive because the Communists want to make use of them and they haven't made use of them yet."

Dr. Doob, a 45-year-old physician and wife of a University of Illinois mathematics professor, has been appointed the receiver of Noel's estate, fixed at about $60,000.

A Boston court granted her permission to spend about $3,500 a year in her quest for her brother.

Dr. Doob said some of the money has gone for legal fees and some was spent on a trip to Geneva, Switzerland, shortly after Noel disappeared.

She said the rest has gone for tracking down stories concerning the whereabouts of the four missing Fields.

Dr. Doob said that whenever she reads a news story about any of them she tries to get in touch with the reporter who wrote it and eventually reach his news sources in an attempt to get a lead on the Fields.

The latest report, she said, was that Noel was being held as a political prisoner in Moscow, pending a "superior trial" in which he would be the chief witness and the chief defendant.

Dr. Doob said she would be willing to "spend everything I could possibly raise" to obtain the release of her relatives.

Hermann's wife, Kate, lives in Cleveland, O. She has obtained permission to use $60,000 of Hermann's funds.

Dr. Doob said Kate and she would "give every cent of that and what Noel has and more if we

Little Hope for Finding Woman

Mason, Fla. Jan. 9 (UPI) — Sheriff's Deputy James O. Baker, who has directed the search for Mrs. Hugh LeMay, the French Canadian beauty who vanished Friday night in the Florida Keys, says hope is waning that she will be found alive.

Baker said it could be considered significant that the bond for a body in the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico waters that washes the shores of the Keys has been increased.

"It is almost inconceivable," he said, "that a person alive and able to walk around would remain undetected for so long."

But if Mrs. LeMay fell or was thrown into the sea, he added, the possibility of recovering her body near the scene of the accident would be remote now. The tide might have swept her miles away.

Mrs. LeMay disappeared as she and her husband, George LeMay, a 45-year-old Montreal real estate man, fished from a bridge.

"Externally, the 52 Studebaker revealed entirely new front-end treatment and substantial restyling in the rear," says Mr. Archer. "All models look much longer and wider than before. Hoods are longer and lower, with new emblems and ornaments. Grilles embody wrap-around styling and stands out as the most distinctive front-end feature of the new models. The massive wrap-around bumpers are equipped with four vertical guards, two located under the head lamps, to protect the car from the customary day-to-day bumps, and two smaller guards to protect the license plate from damage. Headlamps, runs are of new design and the parking lights, also new, are larger.

The most significant changes in the rear are found in the tail lights and trunk lid handles. The tail lights appear to be integral parts of the rear fenders rather than "added on" assemblies, give the effect of extending the sweep of the fender, and thus a corresponding increase in body length. Their design, however, does not sacrifice any of the increased area of illumination which proved so popular in the '51 models. Trunk lid handles incorporate new styling on all but the lowest price Champion model.

Surfer, yet softer, and easier brake action has been achieved by changes in the brake pedal linkage and the adoption of floating rear shoes in all brakes. Both front and rear shoes in all brakes are now completely self-adjusting.

Other innovations include instrument panel push button starting on all models equipped with automatic drive, a new type of starter for the Champion which is held in positive engagement until the engine is fully operating, moisture-proof ignition system, and a boost in the generator output to 35 amperes on both the Champion and Commander.

Heat-resisting, glare-reducing glass for windshield, side and rear windows is optional on all models at extra cost. Rear view visibility on convertibles has been greatly increased by enlarging the rear window areas by nearly 200 square inches.

Upholstery and trim suggest drawing room elegance. Seats are particularly outstanding in comfort, durable materials and colors. Button tufted seat cushions are standard on the State Commander and Land Cruiser. Also on the "Starliner" and convertible when nylon trim is specified. Boosted seat backs, featured in Studebaker's postwar cars for the first time, are standard in the Regal, Champion, State Commander and Land Cruiser. Side rails and door trim match the richness and attractiveness of upholstery and appointments.

Even solid color choices are available for the '52 models with the exception of the Starliner which is offered in only of eleven different two-tone color combinations. Four new hues are included among the solid colors: Mahogany, Neotone blue, Tahoe green and Piedmont gray.

In performance safety, comfort and appearance, these 1952 Studebaker Champions and Commanders are truly outstanding," says Mr. Archer. "I know the public is going to be enthusiastic about them."

1952 Model Studebaker on Display

Studebaker's 1952 passenger cars designed both inside and outside in keeping with the company's reputation for "style ahead" leadership are now being displayed by Archer Motor Co. local Studebaker dealer.

Added to the wide range of Studebaker body styles this year is the new "Starliner," a five-passenger, hardtop convertible. It is available in both the Champion and Commander lines in eleven different two-tone color combinations, and two standard upholstery options.

Styled for smoothness and unimpaired visibility, the new model combines the advantages of the convertible with those of the all-weather sedan. The Starliner typifies the styling, design and appointments of the company's entire series of new models.

"Externally, the '52 Studebaker revealed entirely new front-end treatment and substantial restyling in the rear," says Mr. Archer. "All models look much longer and wider than before. Folks Want Less Words, More Action

Washington Jan. 9 (AP) — The consensus of "grass root" reports from four Democratic members of Congress is that the "folks" back home want less words and more action.

The eight lawmakers, Senator Margaret Smith (R-Mo.), Kerr (D-Ore.), Sparkman (D-La.), Kefauver (D-Tenn.), Duff (R-Penn.), Knowland (R-Calif.) and representatives Rev. Roscoe (D-Ill.) and Cecil Harden (R-Ind.) spoke at a dinner sponsored by the Women's National Press Club here last night.

In the audience were more than 200 fellow members of Congress and men and women prominent on the Washington scene—and here are some of the highlights they heard from the report-makers:

Senator Kerr, found the home folks concerned about the high cost of living, "so-called scandals, taxes and getting 100 per cent security out of each defense dollar."

Sen. Kefauver expects the problem of general loss of moral fiber undoubtedly will be an issue in the coming campaign, but said the people in his home state of Tennessee know that wrongdoing is not the prerogative of Democrats.

Production of Household Goods to Drop

Washington, Jan. 9 (AP)—Production of most household goods is due to be cut to 40 per cent of pre-Korean war levels and construction of new homes is to be reduced about 23 per cent beginning next April.

This announcement came today from Manly Fleischmann, the Defense Production Administrator, who also said automobile production is to be curtailed by at least seven per cent for the second quarter of this year.

Fleischmann testified before the Senate House Preparedness committee.

He said makers of such non-essentials as jewelry and toys will be given slight increases in allotments of aluminum and copper during April-June quarter so that they can continue in business. Most of those involved are small businesses which had been cut heavily on the use of these metals in the first three months of this year.

Fleischmann said enough allotments would be made to support present school and hospital buildings and to start construction of some new buildings.

The number of new railroad cars to be produced will be reduced

Brockington Fined for Contempt

Little Rock, Jan. 9 (AP)—L. S. (Bill) Brockington, unsuccessful 1950 candidate for lieutenant governor of Arkansas, has been fined $50 for contempt of court.

Pulaski Circuit Judge Guy Amsler cited Brockington, of North Little Rock, and Conway, for failure to appear in court as a co-defendant in a lawsuit filed by Ernest R. Keller of Conway.

Keller is seeking $6,972 as the alleged unpaid balance on a promissory note made to him by Brockington in August 1950.

Mrs. Dora Garrett Mabry, widow of a Faulkner County physician, also was named as a co-defendant in the suit. The litigation stated she endorsed Brockington's note.

Judge Amsler has delayed a decision in the matter.

Brockington is a defendant in a Pulaski Chancery Court suit filed by Mrs. Mabry. She is seeking an $80,000 judgment on an alleged loan made by her husband to Brockington and Willard E. Blain of Conway in 1948.

The original term of copyright under existing U. S. law runs for 28 years.

about 14 per cent, he testified. He said only the most important new highways could be built.

The Senate House committee is headed by Senator Maybank (D-SC).

Maybank said his group wanted to make sure the mobilization agencies are earmarking for civilian production as much steel and other scarce materials as possible.

Members of the joint committee also sought details on the "period of severest pinch" for civilians, which Wilson says has begun and will last into 1953.

Part of the formation already was out. Auto production will be trimmed to 900,000 passenger cars and 240,000 trucks in the quarter starting April 1. This was welcome tidings to the industry, however; until this week plans called for only 800,000 cars and 200,000 trucks.

Home building is due for a cut. Henry H. Fowler, the new head of the National Production Authority, told reporters yesterday that the shortage of plumbing, hardware and other building supplies will not permit a continuance of the present rate—about 850,000 homes a year.

CHAPTER THIRTY

EDNA'S appearance at Barth's church had been his first inkling of her interest in Joe. Since then—since Anne's apparent definite rejection of him—Donald wondered if Edna had made any better progress. He was deeply concerned lest that happen, or had happened. For Edna, with the right man, would be all right. But with Joe—there was really nothing for her with Joe save certain hurt and possible disgrace.

Well, there was little or nothing he could do about it. He had tried, at various times, after school or meeting her on the street, to get her to give him an opening, but he had never succeeded. Nor had she ever returned for a second visit to the Little Stone Church. It was odd, his mind went on, that because of that one innocent talk with her, in full view of the outpouring congregation, he had suffered a public humiliation, after which there had started against him a tide of popular opinion that, from being only a sluggish undercurrent of which he had been faintly aware, had risen to the surface and was now boiling along in a most disturbing way. He knew it as well as he knew he was sitting here. He could only hope it was not as strong as the tide in his favor—for he had that, too. His jaw tightened for a moment. But it was impossible to fight against intangibles. He had better not think about it—the slowly growing coolness here and there, the pricking questions, the stirring remarks, he had better stick to a review of his teaching.

That had been all right, anyway. Yes, in spite of some of the letters from parents that he had received. Barth had said, "Look out, Donald. You'll chop off your own head."

And he had replied, with heat, "I don't care! I've seen my students come alive. They're thinking!"

"I know! I know! Our greatest national resource is our citizens, and they must be lifted to the highest possible level. But slowly, my boy. Slowly."

However, slowness had not been in him. His passionate zeal for his work had carried him often past the point of caution. Anyway, he thought now, he had his classes in the palm of his hand, and it had been easy this past month to swing them over to the study of economics and, through that, to their larger relationship to America. How well, he had asked, holding the imaginary jobs they had chosen last fall, which would bring them incomes of two, three and four thousand dollars—how well could a family of four live? They had delighted in working out budgets for that. And, thus eased into lures used by drunken drivers in an attempt to prove they were not intoxicated.

"And it's difficult, also, to determine just whether a driver involved in an accident actually was drunk," Thompson added.

The state police have taken definite action to cut down on violation of speed laws by inaugurating the use of unmarked cars.

There now are 28 of them in operation, and Lindsey says the practice will be continued throughout 1952. The department started using the cars last October. It showed no encouraging results for the first month because "people hadn't yet heard about it and still thought they could get away with speeding."

But in November and December, the traffic death toll showed a slight decrease from the count for the same months in 1950. And Lindsey said there was a definite indication that some drivers were slowing up a little when the dangers of arrest became more apparent.

But regardless of what the law enforcement officers do, Lindsey believes the main responsibility still is up to the motorist himself.

"Until the average motorist takes it upon himself to drive with care, our job always will be difficult," he said.

But the state police director still has some plans he hopes will make for better enforcement of traffic safety laws with the hoped-for result that it will force more motorists into being careful.

There are four stanzas to the Star Spangled Banner.

press himself plainly before the School Board. He was not to be cowed by humbers against him or by the fear of losing his job—for in Crestwood the Superintendent had no tenure. He was retained only as long as his services were considered beneficial to the school system. Unmindful of this, Carl would—and often had—fought an opposition presented by reason of ignorance, miserliness, or prejudice to gain some advantage for his staff of teachers which he believed to be their just due, or to secure some improvement for his schools. He was far above politics himself, although he was aware of their devious workings and subtle power. And he had maintained his position in the town in spite of, not because of, his integrity and high purpose. For this he could thank those wisest and most influential citizens who appreciated his worth.

He believed firmly in three things—God, discipline and justice. And by these he ruled his personal life, his family, and his schools. Those who knew him loved him for his warmth and gentle kindness. But few knew him outside of his office, since he cherished the privacy of his home. His students trusted and feared him. The School Board gave him a grudging respect. Crestwood, as a whole, was proud of him, since because of him they could be proud of their schools. Probably only one man actively disliked him, and that was Alvin Mellick, whose dislike was rooted in a narrow jealousy of his prestige and resentment of his social exclusiveness.

He nodded now toward the chair by his desk, and Donald sat down. Always deliberate in speech, Carl picked up a pencil and began tapping it lightly on the blotter before him, his eyes fixed on its bobbing point. Don waited. Presently Carl laid down the pencil, tipped back his chair, grasped its arms in a decisive manner, and looked directly into the face of the young man before him.

"You," he said, in his mild way, "are the subject of more controversy in this school—and this town—than I have ever encountered before in my nineteen years of service."

"I know—" Donald began, but Carl held up his hand.

"I engaged you because I felt you would be a good teacher. My close—and perhaps, to you, annoying—supervision of your work has corroborated my belief in you. There is no unreason or uncertainty in you as to the purpose of education and your own methods of accomplishing that purpose."

"Thank you, sir."

Four Reasons for Highway Fatalities

(Editor's note: This is the second of a series of three articles on the Arkansas traffic fatality problem.)

By WILLIAM W. HUGHES

Little Rock, Jan. 9 (UP)—Just what are Arkansas motorists doing wrong that is bringing sharply heavier traffic fatality tolls in these days of widely-publicized safety organizations and campaigns?

This is a problem that is causing serious concern to the state police and city and county law enforcement officers.

The Arkansas press also has been puzzled by the upswing in the state's death toll that came in the week just following the nationwide publicity given the nation's one-millionth traffic victim since gasoline-powered vehicles first made their appearance in America.

The United Press asked Police Director Herman Lindsey if publicity was proving of any value in combating the traffic toll in view of the fact that the deaths are occurring more frequently despite adequate warnings by the press.

"We feel publicity always helps and that the toll would have been still higher in 1951 if there had been less publicity on the problem," Lindsey said. He was referring to the fact that the Arkansas toll in 1951 was the second highest in history with 428 fatalities.

Lindsey and his chief safety officer, Sgt. Mack Thompson, listed four principal causes of traffic accidents in Arkansas:

- 1—Drunken driving.
- 2—Failure to keep a proper distance between vehicles.
- 3—Carelessness in passing vehicles.
- 4—Speeding.

Lindsey said many accidents are caused by drivers who insist on following other vehicles too closely and being unable to avoid accidents brought on by sudden stops, changes in direction and swerving. Failure to keep the proper distance also applies to the practice of getting as close as possible to the centerline of highways when meeting vehicles coming from the opposite direction, Lindsey added.

Improper passing also has caused highway tragedies, he said. "Motorists have to learn to be sure the left-hand lane is entirely clear for a long distance ahead before trying to pass," he declared.

Drunken drivers undoubtedly cause a large share of traffic accidents, Lindsey added.

Thompson pointed out that it was difficult to determine exactly how many accidents are caused by drunkenness because of subteran attempt to prove they were not intoxicated.

"And it's difficult, also, to determine just whether a driver involved in an accident actually was drunk," Thompson added.

The state police have taken definite action to cut down on violation of speed laws by inaugurating the use of unmarked cars.

There now are 28 of them in operation, and Lindsey says the practice will be continued throughout 1952. The department started using the cars last October. It showed no encouraging results for the first month because "people hadn't yet heard about it and still thought they could get away with speeding."
